Call to Worship

Leader: Could it be, Great conductor of the Universe, that You see us as Instruments meant to play together in Your symphony?

People: Now, in this quiet pause of worship, we stop to listen inwardly to the quality and style of music we each produce.

Leader: Tell us again how we need to cooperate with each other and with you until the composer’s message rings clear and strong to the world around us.

People: Teach us again to read the signs of rhythm on your score that asks for sounds loud and soft, long and short, high and low.

Leader: Judge us with sternness so that he/she who will not play his/her part or insists destroying your harmony with his/her own note, feels Your call for Quality.

People: Here we are, divine maestro, ready to lift our instruments; ready to play (with skill or not); ready to use our talents and skills to teach, to guide, to serve, to study, to practice.

All: Oh Master Musician, who taught the angels to sing, hear the song each in this congregation sings...yet more...the symphony we create. Teach us to play love songs to your world so that through us humankind will see Your love.
